ANNUAL SCHOOL OF MISSIONS TO MEET

The Annual School of Missions of the Memorial Methodist Church begins Sunday evening, January 11, at 6:00 o'clock, with a Fellowship Covered-Dish Supper sponsored by Circle No. 1, Mrs. Ivey Holland, Chairman, of the Woman's Society of Christian Service. Each person is encouraged to bring a dish of food and join the fellowship hour; and immediately the first discussion period of the book, "Alaska and Hawaii" will be conducted by Mr. Lewis Motley. The Discussion Period will begin at 6:45 and at 7:30 o'clock, the Evening Worship Service will be conducted, with Mr. Claude W. Smith presiding. Dr. Basil R. Truscott will be the guest speaker.

Dr. Truscott was born in Australia and came to this country with his parents in early life, where he completed his education. For six years he was a pastor of Methodist Churches in Nebraska, and for thirty-six years he was a missionary in South America, being pastor of the First Methodist Church, Buenos Aires, Argentina. While in that city he was associated with a mission which has now become a leading Methodist Church there. The Memorial Methodist Church is now partially supporting the work of that church in the need of a thriving metropolis of South America. In 1956 ,Dr. Truscott and his family returned to the States and chose the Virginia Conference for his residence; having been appointed by Bishop Paul N. Garber to be pastor of the Timberlake Methodist Church in Lynchburg.

The School of Missions of Memorial is being arranged by the Commission of Missions, Mrs. J. Newton Jennings, chairman, and the Commission urges each member of the church to be present, and visitors are always welcome for all services conducted in the church. A large attendance is anticipated for the first of the Series of Missionary Emphasis which will continue each Sunday evening for the next six Sundays, with a varied type of program each evening.

At the 11 o'clock morning worship service, the Annual Tithing Adventure will be launched, with Senator Chas. T. Moses, Sr., chairman of the Stewardship and Finance Commission, making a statement to the membership about the Plan of the Proposed Emphasis for the period of January to Easter. The Minister will use for his sermon subject, "Why I am a Methodist..." The Youth Choir of the church will present a special anthem.

Sign on a farm gate: "If you can't get it, don't open it." Not bad. That was one gate we were very careful to close, hook, and otherwise leave as we found it.

I have had some revealing experiences with "self-operating elevators." Once I got into one and thought I would never get out . . . any floor. But it has been my experience that once an idea is established as workable, others come in and expand it and increase its use. Therefore, I was fascinated to see the operation of a parking garage without drivers. A man at the control spot pushes a button whereupon the conveyer draws the driverless-car to an elevator, another button hoists it to the selected floor level, and another button conveys it out to its parking spot. Brother, that's something to see!

Whenever you are in Richmond, you will find the most valued art asure in the state of Virginia in rotunda of the State Capitol ding. It is the marble statue George Washington carved by great French sculpture, Jean ome Houdon. It is the only one existence of Washington done n real life. Houdon spent many ks at Mount Vernon studying the tures of Washington, and made ds mask of his face. Washington then six feet two inches tall, age 52. The finished statue was ited at the famous Louvre in ris for eight years and then ught to Virginia.

I had wanted to say something t George Washington as a ner. He loved his farm lands, s 8,000 acres, around Mount non more than he loved fightor politics. He conducted exments in improved methods of ming. He left a chart to guide ers as to the proper rotations crops, and he conducted experiits with fertilized and unfertil crops. And George Washington s Custis, at Arlington, continthe experiments and so it is t the family of Washington left with the inspiration for most of farm programs.

Washington proposed a place in new United States government a farm program . . . and unlly, the early congressmen and ators turned it down. Farm proms have had rough sledding ever e, but I say that unless we eat, gerish and that the American mer nobility deserves the high ce Washington gave him.

One of the most fabulous cavalry erals of the Confederacy was n. Jo Shelby . . . a Confederate never surrendered although he ed for 32 years after Appomattox. elby fought in the Mississippi and the western phase of the ril War and therefore is rarely tioned in our Virginia history But he commanded a great famous army, once up to 60,0 men. Jo Shelby would never ept Confederate money . . . He ays wanted United States mon. He became famous for many ons . . . one of the most conversal because he took up for James boys, Jessie James and nk James. The scene was the tle of Prairie Grove in 1863. elby was a hero and in the front ds of his cavalry and he was ut to be captured a prisoner when nie and Frank James and a few ers rescued him. He never forot it. It is a matter of record as in 1883 when Frank James was ing tried for his crimes, General Shelby, the old Confederate war e, was a character witness in behalf . . . and James was acitted after Shelby arose and deended a chance to go and shake hand of an old confederate oldier.

School-Community Cannery Volume Up

The number of cans of fruits, meats, and vegetables processed in Appomattox County's two school-community canneries showed an increase of more than one-third in 1958 over 1957. A total of 47,260 cans were processed in the school cannery at the Appomattox High School. Total production in the cannery at the Pamplin Elementary School was 23,493 cans.

In addition to food conserved by canning, 13,724 pounds of lard was rendered, and 3,879 pounds of sausage prepared. There was also several hundred pounds of fruits, meats and vegetables prepared for freezing.

Instruction in the best methods of preparing and canning food was given daily in each cannery. In the Appomattox Cannery, the instructors were Mrs. Emma Lemon and Mr. Robert Beale. Mrs. A. R. Southall again served as instructor in the Pamplin Cannery

Nearly 800 persons—483 at Appomattox and 304 at Pamplin—enrolled in the school cannery program during the year just ended. "While the increase in the volume of food conserved is gratifying, the number of citizens participating in the Vocational Agriculture-Vocational Home Economics Food Production and Conservation Program is more significant," says H. B. Pack, instructor of vocational agriculture in the Appomattox High School. Pack, Mrs. Lucy Green, Mrs. Madeline Thomas and W. L. Moteley are responsible for supervision of the program as a part of the adult education program of the Appomattox High School.

Established in 1942, the Appomattox School Community Cannery is among the oldest of more than 100 similar facilities in Virginia. The local food production and conservation program has been recoginised in many ways, including a widely-distributed motion picture and articles in national publications.

The canneries are operated by the Appomattox County School Board in cooperation with the Agricultural Education and Home Economics Services of the State Department of Education.

Mrs. Sheffield Speaks Before Legion Aux.

Arrangements of poppies and individual place cards with a poppy on each, adorned the table of the private dining room of Maud's restaurant Monday evening for the dinner meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary at 7:00 o'clock. Mrs. J. R. Sheffield, immediate past President of the American Legion Auxiliary, Department of Virginia, who is now serving as Area B Rehabilitation Chairman, spoke to the group on the rehabilitation of veterans. She told of her heart warming trip to McGuire Hospital in Richmond, December, to work in the Gift Shop there, which is a "miniature department store" set up by the Legion Auxiliary, Department of Virginia, for patients to do their Christmas shopping for each member of their family without cost to the veteran. Each veteran was also given a gift, made possible through contributions from Auxiliary units throughout the state.

There are now 515,000 patients in veteran hospitals in the United States and another 600,000 who receive treatment. She urged the members to become better informed of the rights and privileges of veterans, in order that the local community can be of more service to them. Members were urged to write their congressmen, favoring the appropriation of funds for hospitals, of veterans, pensions of widows ow World War I, II and the Korean conflict, preserving the integrity of the F. B. I. files, and to oppose the curtailing of funds for hospitalization of veterans as well as the changing of Memorial Day from May 30 to the last Monday in May.

Members voted to purchase 2,000 poppies for sale on Memorial Day and plans for a covered dish supper in February were discussed.

Virginia Highway Traffic Toll Dropped to 853 in Past Year

Richmond, Jan. 14—Col. C. W. Woodson, Jr., Superintendent of State Police and Chairman of the Governor's Highway Safety Committee, announces a tentative 853 as the number of Virginia traffic deaths for 1958. This was a substantial drop below the 912 of 1957.

Col. Woodson said he used the word "tentative" because some slight upward revision can be expected if more late reports are received or people die who are now carried as injured since, for statistical purposes, their deaths would revert to the date of injury.

Two all-time records were set with the death rate (deaths per 100 million miles of travel) computed at 5.55 and pedestrian deaths held to 148 Previous lows were a rate of 6.1 last year and 163 in 1955. Recorded highs were a rate of 24.2 in 1932 and 343 pedestrian deaths in 1941. This progress was made despite a rise of from 2 to 3 per cent in traffic volumes.

Also down were crashes in which more than one person was killed. In 1957, 92 of these brought death to 239 people while the 1958 picture was 80 which killed 197 people. Crashes not involving contact with another vehicle rose from 337 in 1957 to 339 but resultant deaths were down from 391 to 380. Deaths of servicemen rose from 59 to 71. Urban deaths were up from 140 in 1957 to 158 and rural ones down from 772 to 695. These last statistics, Col. Woodson said, reflect a steady trend which might be attributed to the steady annexation of rural areas by municipalities.

Asked to comment, Col. Woodson stated that progress was being made in all fields of traffic safety promotion but that he felt the interest of the public at large had reached a very high level.

"We must keep this interest and corresponding activity alive and not feel we can slow down after a job well done. After all, there were 853 people who lost their lives unnecessarily and we must remember that the better the record we achieve, the more difficult it is to improve upon it," he concluded.

Mock Battles Planned During Centennial Celebration

Washington, D. C. -At least three engagements that occurred in the opening weeks of the Civil War appear now to be definitely slated for reenactment during the forthcoming Centennial of the great American conflict, Karl S. Betts, executive director of the Civil War Centennial Commission, announced here today.

These are the attack on Fort Sumter on April 12, the battle of Philippi, West Virginia, on June 3, and the first battle of Manassas, on July 21, all in 1861.

Plans for suitable observances at these points already have been started by local authorities, Mr. Betts reported. Committees have been organized in some instances, and programs, all to be coordinated with the national Centnnial Commission, gradually are taking shape.

The executive director made his announcement at the National Centennial Commission, a 25-member group established by public law, prepared to wind up its first year of operations with a meeting to be held at the Department of Interior on January 6. Reports and a further extension of plans will be among principal items on the itinerary for the session.

Meanwhile, Major General U. S. Grant, 3rd, chairman of the Commission, reiterated that the Centennial will be carried out on a "local enterprise" basis.

"We have no intention," he explained, "of telling a community, a county, or a state how it shall observe the Centennial. Each locality will be encouraged to work out its own observance. Our function here at national headquarters will be that of a coordinating agency, working to avoid conflict or overlapping wherever possible and assisting in any manner within our power and authority. As Congress appropriated for our use only enough money to cover operating expenses, each locality will have to bear the expense of the program it devises."

The chairman emphasized that he did not foresee the Centennial as a series of battle reenactments.

"Certain of the key battles naturally will be refought," he said. "But such representations are expensive and involve much labor for their organization and rehearsal, so we envision the observance of this most significant period in our history rather at a four-part pageant of useful educational programs, dedications, land acquisitions, monuments and marker unveilings, and similar steps to emphasize the lessons afforded us by the war in a manner that will bring us the greatest benefit. We also hope to gain valuable historical information by this great program in which we plan to relive the war."

At Charleston, S. C., scene of the Fort Sumter attack, the Chamber of Commerce already has held meetings to discuss plans for a suitable reenactment, but definite action has been delayed pending the inauguration next month of a new Governor. The incoming executive, Ernest F. Hollings of that city, is expected to be sympathetic toward such a program and push for necessary legislation to insure South Carolina's part in the war being fully covered during the Centennial.

Julian Metz, executive director of the Charleston Chamber, announced that, though concrete action has been postponed pending the inaugural, plans for the Centennial definitely are in the making and that he has every reason to believe they will include re-enactment of th attack on Fort. Sumter.

Dr. Myers reported that meetings to discuss plans for a reenactment already have been held by the Historical Society, with representatives of other interested organizations present, and that he is confident a suitable program will be agreed upon, possible with some cooperation from nearby communities and from the state. While relatively obscure, the battle at Philippi was of far-reaching importance. It open the way for the formation of the state of West Virginia, secured the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad west of the

He comes from Appomattox,
And the spreading Apple Tree."

The above rhyme was used during Gen. U. S. Grant's successful campaign for a second term as President. Many famous stories have told about "The Apple Tree" at Appomattox. There is a marker on the right side, of Route 24 up the hill from Appomattox River, designating the site of the famed tree. However, the original road was to the right of the present Route 24, and so in 1865, "The Appleo Tree" under Gen. Lee rested was on the left side of the road.
